

THE Rev. Dr. Bishop, of Lockport, N. Y., while visiting friends at Rockford, Ill., was stricken with paralysis and died Monday.

LEE F. WILSON, a member of the Indiana legislature, from Shelby county, was arrested Monday, charged with violating the pension laws.

HOLZHAY, the bandit who has been terrorizing Northern Michigan and Wisconsin, was safely lodged in jail at Bessemer, this state, at an early hour Monday morning.

THE funeral of Mrs. Sullivan, mother of the noted prize-fighter, at Boston, Monday, was largely attended. Beautiful and artistic floral designs were conspicuously displayed by the admirers of the pugilist.

THE Ohio democratic state convention at Dayton, last Wednesday, nominated a state ticket, headed by Hon. James E. Campbell, of Butler county, for governor, and adopted resolutions demanding a reduction of the tariff; denouncing the administrations of Governor Foraker and President Harrison; opposing trust, and favoring liberal and equitable pension laws.

NEVADA wants to be adopted. She has become tired of being a state, and would be glad to escape the expenses and obligations of statehood. Nevada was part of the California territory ceded by Mexico to the United States in 1848. Then it was attached to Utah. It was constituted a territory in 1861 and admitted into the Union in 1864. In 1880 its population was about 62,000, but it has now fallen to about 40,000. The state has never prospered, and the people are seriously discussing schemes of annexation or junction with some other state or territory.

THE Nashville American and some other bourbon organs will groan worse than ever now that the "Grand Army of Beggars" have unanimously endorsed Pension Commissioner Tanner. They will be thoroughly disgusted when they come to count up the number of democrats who, as members of the G. A. R., voted for the Tanner resolution. It is hinted that the Free Press is almost mad enough to repeat its war declaration of 1861. That paper has been one of Tanner's constant defamers, although it has not yet had the courage to come right out, as the Nashville American does, and call the G. A. R. a "grand army of beggars."—Detroit Tribune.

In his address before the assembled thousands of veterans at Milwaukee, last week, Commander-in-Chief Warner gave voice to the following beautiful sentiment: "I commend to each department the patriotic practice of the Posts in the department of New York of presenting on the 23d of February, the birthday of the father of his country, the American flag to such public schools as are not yet in possession of one. Let the children receive the stars and stripes from the men who placed their bodies as a living wall between it and those who would tear it down. From its stars and stripes let them learn the story of liberty as exemplified in the lives of Washington, Lincoln, Grant and the patriotic sons of the republic."

THE killing of Judge Terry in California has raised a constitutional question of momentous importance, and its settlement, when it finally reaches the United States supreme court, will involve serious consequences. Both Justice Field and Marshal Nagle were arrested for the shooting of Terry. The state of California claims jurisdiction in the case. The federal authorities, on the other hand, insist that as the shooting was done by a federal officer, by federal orders, in defense of a United States justice, they alone have jurisdiction. It will be seen that the old question of States' rights is at issue in this conflict of federal and state authority, and the contention promises to be a fierce one. If the federal authorities succeed in carrying their view of the case, the logical applications of the principle will extend the agis of the United States over every federal official, including letter-carriers and custom house messengers.

Alger is Commander-in-Chief. While the election of General Alger as Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic was confidently looked for, the election itself and the circumstances leading up to it were surprises to almost everyone there, and to no one more than the general himself. Judge Veazey, of Vermont, was a candidate, and it was generally supposed he had a large following from the New England states. Private Dazell, of Ohio, was (of course) a candidate, but it was not clear where he expected to get his votes, as Ohio was known to be almost solid for Alger against the field. The Iowans had decided to give at least a complimentary vote to Gen. Consigny, of Avoca. At the Wednesday afternoon session a resolution had been passed agreeing to meet at night and hear the nominating speeches, and to ballot for officers on Thursday morning. The roll of states was called for nominations, and when Vermont was reached Judge Veazey arose and said that he saw plainly the sentiment was strongly in favor of Gen. Alger, so he would withdraw his name. Consigny, of Iowa, then withdrew his name, while the irrepressible Dazell was not heard from, either by himself or anyone else. The matter standing in this shape, a resolution to rescind the former resolution, as to the time to elect, was passed, and the secretary was instructed to cast the ballot of the encampment for General Alger, which was done amid the wildest enthusiasm. A. G. Weissart, of Wisconsin, was then chosen Senior Vice-Commander, and Col. Lovett, of New Jersey, Junior Vice-Commander, in the same manner. The election of General Alger will give the liveliest satisfaction to grand army men everywhere. His brilliant war record and his unvarying loyalty to the G. A. R. makes him admired and respected even where his pure private life is not so intimately known as it is in his own state.

It was decided to hold the next encampment at Boston.

The Quadri-Centennial Exposition.

THE newspaper press of Michigan is a unit in favor of Chicago as the location of the World's Exposition of 1892, and this universal preference is based on logical grounds, as: Chicago has more room; is more easy of access to a vast majority of the people of the United States; has a greater amount of hotel accommodations than any city in America; is the terminus of nearly one-third the entire railroad mileage of the United States; its telegraphic facilities are unequalled; its people alert, enterprising, wide-awake, liberal; its newspapers the ablest conducted of any on this continent; its financial resources absolutely unlimited, and the health of the city at all seasons of the year excellent. But it was left for the Lansing Republican to advance the one special argument in favor of Chicago, or, rather, in explanation of why Michigan espoused the cause of Chicago so warmly, and as the Republican's whole article is very readable, we reproduce it: "If Michigan wanted the world's fair, Chicago would at once perceive the propriety of taking a rear pew. But Michigan doesn't want it; and as Michigan is a western state, her citizens are overwhelmingly in favor of locating the fair in the western central part of this country. It should be located near the great heart of the nation, where the products and peoples of every nook and corner of this North American empire can easily come together.

"For this purpose there is no more natural and convenient center (outside of Michigan) than Chicago. Other western and southern cities possess advantages, but they are not bidding for this prize and are favoring Chicago.

"Again, every Michigan man is at home in Chicago. Michigan has almost built Chicago, in its leisure moments, as it were. It is mostly made from Michigan stone and lumber. Its people have been fed from Michigan soil. A Chicagoan would reject at once a suggestion that he could obtain as satisfactory results from a bed, chair or table manufactured outside of Michigan. A Chicago infant could not secure a properly built and satisfactory collar from any but Michigan fruits, nor obtain refreshing sleep in cradle or cot that did not bear a Michigan trademark. Chicago sends as many lobbyists to the Michigan legislature as Detroit, Grand Rapids or Saginaw. These are a few unmistakable proofs of the vim, enterprise, liberality and wealth of Chicago, which incline Michigan to favor her claims to the big fair, and render it an eminently proper and neighborly act for the Michigan press and people to extend to her a kindly and helping hand. She has the site; the facilities for safe and rapid transportation, and for comfortably entertaining an army of visitors, and the pride to make the affair a success.

"Some of the statements contained in the editorial circular must be regarded as a sort of 'poetic license,' however. Chicago climate is fair, as a rule. Michigan lies to the north and east, and the prevailing summer breezes are from that direction. It has an unlimited water supply, but its purity is not so abundantly attested as the circular would imply. The fluid is, however, well adapted for navigation, culinary and laundry purposes, and if pure or medicinal waters are essential for any purpose, Michigan, with its thousands of pure and sparkling streams and springs, lies directly opposite—a short and delightful sail, which no visitor could afford to miss.

"New York and Washington are quite essential to this country for commercial, diplomatic and strategic purposes, but for a world's fair, Chicago is superior to either."

In Consumption Incurable? Read the following: Mr. C. H. Morris, Newark, Ark., says: "Was down with Abscess of Lungs, and friends and physicians pronounced me an incurable consumptive. Began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, am now on my third bottle, and able to oversee the work on my farm. It is the finest medicine ever made." Josie Middlewast, Decatur, Ohio, says: "Had it not been for Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption I would have died of lung troubles. Was given up by doctors. Am now in best of health." Try it. ## M. Snow & Sons' Hot Air Furnace.

PAW PAW, MICH.

To those who contemplate the purchase of a Hot Air Furnace, we commend a perusal of the following testimonials:

Paw Paw, Mich., July 25th, 1889.
M. SNOW & SONS:—I am well pleased with the furnace you put in my house. It heats the house perfectly, gives good air and ventilation, and with less labor than it takes to run a Round Oak stove.
Very Truly,

J. J. WOODMAN.

South Haven, Mich., April 16th, 1889.
MESSRS. M. SNOW & SONS:—GENTLEMEN:—We take pleasure in expressing to you our high appreciation of your large size hot-air tubular furnace in use in our new church edifice. We find that it gives immense satisfaction. If we want still another we should by all means buy one of yours. By order of Building Com. 1st Baptist Church So. Haven, Mich.
